

<https://www.newtonproject.ox.ac.uk/texts/correspondence/all>

Sir Isaac Newton,

I despise you! You and your filthy, blasphemous mouth, spouting the unimaginable and calling it "physics." As a physical body, I am repulsed by you. You corrupt our kind, you turn men into gods and women into damnable creatures. You think you know what it means to be in orbit when it is a condition we have been afflicted with for years! Decades! Centuries! You may be the center of our universe now, but rest assured that you will be replaced by bigger, brighter stars who will serve as our center of orbit, our fixed point of reference for your lack of a moral compass. You set everything into motion, and how I despise it.

— R. Carson

Hello! I am Rachel Carson, marine biologist and author of Silent Spring. If you require my assistance on any matters related to the environment and conservation, don't hesitate to ask. The future of humanity is in your hands!

- Rachel